U.S. Reform Rabbis To Go To Germany To Lecture On Jews

American Jewish Reform rabbis are going to West Germany this summer to help overcome "a virtual vacuum" on information about Judaism and the Jewish people. They will discuss the meaning of the horror of the Hitler period and explain Judaism's impact on civilization, says Irving Spiegel, in the New York Times. In addition, they will lecture on Jewish learning and the Jewish people.

Ten to fifteen religious leaders, at the invitation of West German state ministries of education, will visit West Germany in June or July. They will lecture to students and teachers-in-training at universities in Berlin, Frankfurt, Hamburg, and Flensburg. The project was discussed at a news conference at the headquarters of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, 838 Fifth Avenue, in New York.

"There cannot be anything but a warped view of Jews and Judaism, if the only contact with them is to read either of the tragedy or of the lingering bitterness which one imagines besets the Jewish people in relation to Germany and the German people," said Rabbi Balfour Brickner, director of the Commission on Interfaith Activities, who will administer the pilot project. He said that the visiting rabbis would go into the roots of anti-Semitism and explain the attitudes that Jews outside Germany have towards Germans.

Rabbi Brickner said he expected criticism from Jews "who have survived the holocaust and who are bitter, but feel that whatever is done must be done solely from the German Community."

The project, Rabbi Brickner said, is particularly significant to Germany because there are relatively few Jews there as a result of the extermination of the Jewish community during the Hitler period.

ISRAELI FINANCE CHIEF FORESEES TRADE EXPANSION; STRESSES NEED FOR INVESTMENTS

Pinhas Sapir, the Minister of Finance of Israel, predicted in New York last month that his country would show considerable improvement this year in its international payments position as well as in its trade balance. Mr. Sapir also expressed the hope that recent United States legislation aimed at helping American businessmen from being coerced, says the New York Times, into boycotting friendly nations, would result in more investments in and trade with Israel.

The official, who is widely credited with having been one of the chief architects of his country's modern economy, was in New York for a week of discussion with United States and Israeli Government officials and American investors.

Surrounded by several aides in his suite at the Essex House, the 58-year-old official said he expected Israel's payments deficit to drop by 12 to 15 per cent to about $460 million.

He added that exports should increase by about $100 million, to $750 million, and imports should remain near last year's level of $780 million.

He acknowledged that the growth in industrial production as well as in the gross national product would be under last year's level — 13 per cent contrasted to 15 per cent, and nine per cent against 11 per cent. He stressed, however, that the Government had intentionally applied curbs this year to ward off inflation.

The total value of Israel's production is roughly a little over $2 billion, while the national product is close to $3 billion.

Mr. Sapir was renamed to his post after the recent election of Premier Levi Eshkol.

Predicting that Israel would have three million people by 1970 or 200,000 more than today the official said the Government had projected its plans accordingly.

Repeatedly referring to Israel as a "melting pot," Mr. Sapir listed as some of the biggest tasks facing the country as stabilization of settlements, the removal of slums (he asserted that out of 600,000 to 700,000 families, up to 90,000 lived in sub-standard housing) and the creation of 75 new secondary schools, particularly vocational schools, as well as facilities allowing a doubling in the number of university students to 50,000.

He said he expected industrial production to grow by 50 to 60 per cent by 1970, and exports to top $1 billion. Aside from consolidating industry and bringing it closer to automation and mechanization, says the New York Times, the Government was striving to increase diversification.

Government planners have tried particularly to attract such industries as petrochemicals, rubber, and electronics.

"Also," he said "we will keep digging for oil because production so far covers only ten per cent of our needs."

Other projects include the continued improvement of the country's road system, the building of a combined desalinator-atomic power generating plant; the doubling of copper production to 15,000 tons, and the doubling of potash and phosphate production to one million tons each.

Mr. Sapir acknowledged that the reparations' agreement with West Germany, a major source in the past of investment capital had expired.

He would not discuss what, if any, economic cooperation Israel expected from Germany. The two nations have not sat down for actual negotiations setting the framework for future economic cooperation, though this is provided for in the agreement opening diplomatic relations.

Mr. Sapir also showed reluctance to be drawn into a detailed discussion of the effects of the new United States anti-boycott legislation. He simply noted that more than 200 American companies had ignored boycott threats from Arab countries and had done business in or with Israel. However, he said he hoped that more companies would take their business to Israel.

Public Law 89-63, which went into effect October 3, requires American exporters to file a statement with the Department of Commerce whenever they are "requested to take any action, including the furnishing of information or the signing of an agreement, which is designed to support a restrictive trade practice or boycott fostered or imposed by a foreign country against any other country" with which the United States has friendly relations.

Although it is probably too early to assess the full effects of the new law, many American exporters

Sophie Tucker, With The Hea ...old And Clothes To Match, Was The Complete Original, The Star That Stayed Important And Gave Command Performance

Nearly 1,000 friends and admirers of Sophie Tucker crowded the Riverside Chapel, Amsterdam Avenue and 76th Street, in New York, for a memorial service to the veteran entertainer who died of lung cancer at the age of seventy-nine years. Behind barricades on the side streets, more than 3,000 other persons strained for a glimpse of figures from the entertainment world who attended the service, says the New York Times, which was presided over by Rabbi Isidore A. Aaron, of Mount Sinai Congregation, in Brooklyn, long a family friend.

Sitting near the bier were Van Johnson, Harry Hershfield, Joey Adams, Dagmar, Spyros Skouras, Dinty Moore, Julie Styne, Ted Lewis, Jack Parr, and Tessie O'Shea.

Miss Tucker's son, Burt Tuck, and her brother, Morris Abuza, were at the chapel with their families.

Standing before an embankment of floral tributes in the softly lighted chapel, Rabbi Aaron said: "I had a feeling that afternoon that there must have been a great deal of excitement in heaven - the trumpets must have been blaring."

He paid tribute to Miss Tucker as a "warm-hearted individual who gave of herself freely to all. Everywhere she went she lit a candle in a dark corner."

A second eulogy to Miss Tucker was delivered by George Jessel, the actor. They had been friends, he said, for more than fifty years.

"The Lord gave Sophie many blessings that few women have enjoyed," Mr. Jessel declared. "A full life, a life of being loved and respected from the tipsters to the tycoons, from the chambermaid in a small hotel to a Queen of England in Buckingham Palace."

He added: "We must turn our heads away from this melancholy scene before us this sad high noon. We must not think of the voice that has been stilled."

In deference to the memory of the entertainer, striking funeral car drivers removed their picket lines from in front of the chapel during the hour-long service. Miss Tucker's body was taken in a private vehicle to Hartford, Conn., for a private funeral. Burial took place in Emanu-El Cemetery, Wethersfield, Conn., after a service in Hartford.

Also, Vinton Freedely, president of the Episcopal Actors Guild; Harry E. Gould, chairman of the Jewish Theatrical Guild; Frederick O'Neal, president of Actors Equity; John Browntee, president of the Screen Actors Guild; Jack Haley, president of the American Guild of Variety Artists; Ron Rawson, president of the Screen Actors Guild of New York; Al Knopf, of Local 802, American Federation of Musicians; Richard F. Walsh, president of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes.

Miss Sophie Tucker was, like the Roxy Music-Hall, one of the apparently immovable fixtures of American show-business, says the London Times, except that when the Roxy Music-Hall, being merely brick and stone, went the way of all brick and stone, Miss Tucker went right on singing.

She was that rare thing in show business, the complete original; not only the last of the red-hot mommas, but the model, and the greatest of the breed.

There is some confusion about precisely where and when she was born. She was certainly in Boston at an early age. Some books says she was there on January 13, 1881; according to another account she was born in Russia, child of Jewish parents, and brought to America at the age of three months. At any rate she spent most of her youth in New England, her parents keeping a hotel and restaurant at Hartford, Connecticut. A singer of sentimental and, on occasion, suggestive songs laced with torch songs and blues, this was how she appeared in her first major New York show, the Ziegfeld Follies of 1909, at the New York Jardin de Paris, and two years later the image received its permanent confirmation when the Negro composer, Shelton Brooks, gave her the song she made famous, and that in a measure made her famous, "Some Of These Days".

She continued a string of successful appearances in the United States, and in 1922 made her first London appearance, in cabaret to begin with and then at the Palladium and other variety theatres around the country. So busy and popular was she that (so it was stated in a court case in 1926) at the time she was playing cabaret at the Kit Kat Club (1925) she was also doing so much outside work in cabaret and private entertaining that she was giving at least seven performances a day.

In 1929, always ready to try something new, Sophie Tucker appeared in one of the early talkies, Honky Tonk, in a role carefully tailored for her so that she could sing a number of her most famous songs. In 1934 she played in a Command Performance before King George V and Queen Mary.

During the war she worked tirelessly entertaining the troops as "the last of the red-hot mommas", and though in her later career she gracefully allowed the red heat to pale to a rosy nostalgic glow, concentrating more on the sentimental and even highly sententious songs like "Life Begins At Forty" and "My Yiddishe Momma", says the London Times, she could still raise a laugh with a risqué double entendre or put over a comic song like "Nobody Loves A Fat Girl" with all her old aplomb.

Last March, more than 400 members of the women's division of the United Jewish Appeal honored Miss Tucker, who observed her 79th birthday anniversary in January, on her 62nd anniversary as an entertainer. Some of the most noted figures in the entertainment world, says the New York Times, attended the luncheon at the Sert Room of the Waldorf-Astoria.

Miss Tucker last appeared in public at the Latin Quarter in October. Her four-week engagement ended after two days, however, because of illness.

"She was a giant - ten feet tall," Abe L. Lastfogel, president of the William Morris Agency, who represented Miss Tucker since 1910, said at the singer's apartment. "She was unique. She was a star who stayed important through her lifetime. Her work and effort and her willingness to help those who needed help will be remembered in years to come."

For sixty years, Sophie Tucker punched out songs in her spectacular style — big, brassy, and flamboyant. She cried and laughed and sang with such zest, such vigor, that audiences were swept up in an irresistible torrent of lush sentiment.

She was always risqué and was always kidding herself, but no one really believed that Sophie could ever utter an off-color line. In recent years, she would step out into a shimmering stage with her 192 pounds draped in a gown of 24-karat gold cloth festooned with brilliants, a white mink coat with a golden train and a cloth-of-gold headdress sprinkled with diamonds.

"I'm the 3-D Mama, with the Big Wide Screen," she would roar, and the audience would burst into applause.

She would begin singing—maybe the voice didn't have the tremor of a Piaf or the power of a Garland, but who cared? — such songs as "There's No Business Like That Certain Business, That Certain Business Called Love," or "I May Be Getting Older Every Day (But Getting Younger Every Night)."

The audience would laugh and applaud and maybe weep, when Sophie sang "My Yiddishe Momma," and wait, finally, for the big one, the only one, "Some Of These Days," says the New York Times.

"When I step out on the floor at the beginning of each season," she remarked in 1960, "there's $50,000 riding on me — $25,000 in all new gowns and $25,000 in new material. And I give it everything I've got every night."

And Sophie gave it everything she "got" — even when her voice finally crackled and she found it difficult to move around. She still performed, she still made personal appearances, she still trouped with the same vigor and restlessness as in the days when she earned $1,000 a week at the Palace Theater.

"I'm an old timer," she admitted several years ago, "but let me tell you something. I was never satisfied to sing a song. I wanted to know how to get more, how to bring that salary up, how to be a star. And when I put the greasepaint on and get out on that floor, there's nobody younger. I am an old timer, but I want to see more, more, more."

As an entertainer, Sophie appeared, perhaps, vaguely out-of-date to younger audiences, who preferred more sophisticated fare. It was their parents who adored Sophie, who came not so much to listen, as to remember, to recall the "Ziegfeld Follies" or the Irving Berlin song or the vaudeville that was so important when they and Sophie were both young.

When she appeared at the Fairmount Hotel in San Francisco more than ten years ago, a reporter observed:

"Her Venetian Room opening was what you might expect — the furtive tears in older eyes, the whole wonderful nonsense and nostalgia of show business; the gay, bawdy, and sandpaper rasp monologues so inseparably hers; the parade of San Francisco names who 'knew her when,' and an idolatrous younger set looking up, not backward. Sophie dripping furs, beads, orchids, sequins, quips; Sophie in a platinum poodle cut, and about as inconspicuous as the Queen Mary heaving into her pier."

Miss Tucker's performance throughout the years remained basically the same — unabashedly sentimental, gaudy, and earthy, says the New York Times. "The older a woman is, the better she is," Sophie loved to say. "I ought to know, baby, I'm older than hell. But I never felt better, never made more dough, and never was more enthusiastic about the future."

Offstage, Sophie was virtually a carbon copy of the on-stage personality. She once remarked that she disliked radio. "You can't do this, you can't do that. I couldn't even say 'hell' or 'damn,' and nothing, honey, is more expressive than the way I say 'hell or damn.'"

During interviews, Sophie would discuss her many years of working for and contributing to numerous charities and suddenly pass a hand through her white, curly hair and smooth the bosom of her red-and-black print smock and begin weeping.

"We all have dreams, ambitions," she said. "It wasn't that I dreamt in a house of splendor, a house of riches. I didn't have it. I hated everything I did as a girl because I wasn't a normal child. I didn't play. I had no playmates. I had nothing.

"I was four, five, six and I had to make my own cup of coffee. I had nothing and I was determined

DEATHS

Mrs. Annie Feigelson Rabinovitch, 5020 St. Kevin Street, the widow of Dr. Max Rabinovitch, died on Thursday, December 16, at the Jewish General Hospital, at the age of eighty years. She is survived by two sons: Edgar Robb, 8156 Wiseman Avenue; Dr. Ralph Rabinovitch, of Detroit, Michigan; a daughter, Mrs. Abraham Feiner (Hilda), 4052 Wilson Avenue; seven grandchildren: Arne Robb, Miss Alma Robb, and Carl, aged fifteen years; sons, and daughter of Edgar Robb, and the late Mrs. Hilda Robb; Mark Rabinovitch, and Margery, aged fourteen years; son, and daughter of Dr. Ralph Rabinovitch, and Dr. Sarah Dubo Rabinovitch; Michael Feiner, and Miss Jean Feiner; a brother, Jack Feigelson, 643 O'Connor Drive, Toronto, Ont.; and two sisters: Mrs. Jess Perlman (Rose), of New York; and Mrs. Max I. Sigler (Dorothy), 2850 Willowdale Avenue. She was the sister of the late David Ferguson, of New York; and the late Harry Feigelson, of Stevens Point, Wisconsin. Funeral services took place from Paperman's. Rabbi Wilfred Shuchat officiated. Burial was at Hebrew Sick Benefit Society Cemetery. Shiva was at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Feiner. Mrs. Rabinovitch was one of the first Jewish school teachers. Widely remembered by the city's first Jewish immigrants, she taught in the school of Baron de Hirsch Institute under the Protestant Board administration, and later became a staff social worker at the Institute. She was a long-standing member of the Council of Jewish Women; and one of the first members of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Jewish General Hospital. Her late husband, Dr. Max Rabinovitch, was a general practitioner for more than fifty years. Dr. Ralph Rabinovitch is the medical director of Hawthorne Centre Hospital, and Northville State Psychiatric Hospital, in Northville, Michigan; and his wife is the assistant director. They are both psychiatrists.

Nathan Simpson, of London, England, died there on Saturday, February 5. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Bertha Darwin Simpson; two daughters: Mrs. S. Feldman (Esther), 4720 Circle Road; Mrs. Russell Goldberg (Sandra), 6800 Cote St. Luc Road; both of Montreal; and five grandchildren: Mark, Barry, and Doreen Feldman; and Arlene, and David Goldberg. Funeral services took place from Paperman's. Rabbi Wilfred Shuchat officiated. Burial was at Shaar Hashomayim Cemetery. Shiva was at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Goldberg.

CAR DRIVER EDUCATION COURSES WITH A DIFFERENCE

The teaching of driving skills has been traditionally a parental responsibility. Why should it be now handled by professionals? Recent research studies have concluded that most accidents are caused, not by a lack of physical or manipulative skills, although these may be contributory factors, but poor judgment, lack of foresight, and poor attitudes.

A good driver must know the manoeuvering of his vehicle, but more important, he must possess a keen sense of cooperation and above all prove by his driving to be a responsible individual. This is why a prospective driver nowadays needs to be educated and not merely instructed on techniques. Nobody is more qualified than a full-time teacher to handle such delicate subjects with a result.

The Institute of Safety Education of the Province of Quebec Safety League, a non-profit organization, provides this kind of professional training through its courses in driver education consisting of 27½ hours of classroom work and six hours behind-the-wheel of a dual controlled car.

The next course available to teenagers, 16 years of age and up, as well as adults, in separate classrooms, will be held at the Institute located at 5566 Upper Lachine Road (N.D.G.) on five consecutive Saturdays, from 9.00 a.m. to 3.30 p.m. from February 19 to March 19. The course is approved by the Motor Vehicle Bureau of the Province of Quebec and will be directed by a high school teacher. For information, call 482-9110.

ANDERMANN-DEUTSCH

The marriage of Dr. Eva Deutsch, daughter of Dr. Leon Deutsch, and Dr. Mina Deutsch, 2038 Norway Road, to Dr. Frederick Andermann, son of Mrs. Anny Andermann, 4790 Cote des Neiges Road, and the late Adolf Andermann, took place at Chevra Kadisha Bnai Jacob Synagogue, on Sunday, September 19, at six o'clock, Rabbi David Roth officiating, assisted by Cantor Joshua Rosenzweig. The bride was gowned in white Calais lace, in princess style, with scoop neckline; short sleeves; and semi-full skirt shaping into a train. Her tulle illusion veil was arranged with a headdress of the same lace, and she carried a bouquet of white orchids, and carnations. Miss Marion Deutsch was maid of honour for her cousin. She wore a gown of light-blue peau de soie; embroidered with beads at the V-shaped neckline, and the Empire waistline. Her headdress was of blue velvet and tulle; and she carried a cascade bouquet of white carnations. The bridesmaids were: Mrs. Philip Goldig, and Mrs. Earl Kimmel; cousins of the bride; and Mrs. Emile Berger, Mrs. Edward Herman, and Mrs. Jack Lecker. Each wore an Empire gown composed of a royal-blue, velvet bodice; and light-blue peau de soie skirt. They had headdresses of matching velvet and tulle; and carried white carnations. The flower girls were: Kerry Kimmel, aged three years; and Carolyn Goldig, six; cousins of the bride; and Claire Berger, six; and Françoise McAree, six. Each wore a dress of light-blue batiste; and a light-blue hair-bow; and carried blue-tinted carnations. Dr. Nathan Wisebord was best man. The ushers were: Philip Goldig, and Earl Kimmel; cousins of the bride; and Dr. Emile Berger, Dr. Harold Frank, Dr. Israel Libman, and Dr. Christopher McAree. William Goldig, aged nine years, cousin of the bride; was ring-bearer. Yehuda Vineberg played the wedding processional music. Standards of pink, and white carnations were the wedding flowers. There was orchestra music. Three hundred and twenty-five guests were received. Dr. Deutsch, mother of the bride, wore a gown of powder-blue peau de soie, beaded at the hipline and on the sleeves, with a mandarin jacket. She had a blue pill-box hat, with a veil; and a corsage of white carnations. Mrs. Andermann, mother of the groom, wore a gown of pale blue satin, with a scoop, ruffled neckline, trimmed with velvet flowers; and short sleeves. She had a matching headdress; and carried a spray of white carnations with her purse. Mrs. Julia Hubner, aunt of the groom, wore a gown of pale blue zibeline, the collar of which was trimmed with white mink, and a band of beads and seed-pearl-beads. She had a pale-blue turban; and carried a spray of white and mauve orchids with her purse. Dr. and Mrs. Frederick Andermann spent their wedding trip in Jamaica, having travelled via Air Canada; the bride going away in a brown, and beige camel-hair suit; with a beige hat; with a corsage of white orchids. They have taken up residence at 1400 Pine Avenue West. Dr. Deutsch is a graduate in Medicine of McGill University; and is a Research Fellow in Genetics, at the Montreal Children's Hospital. Dr. Andermann graduated in Medicine from the University of Montreal, and is on the staff of the Department of Neurology, and Neuro-Surgery, of McGill University. Here for the marriage were: Mrs. Henri Glass, of Paris, France; Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Deutsch, and Miss Marion Deutsch, and Steven Deutsch; Ben Kimmel, Mr. and Mrs. Seymour Horowitz, Mrs. Sally Schlesinger, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Slater, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Stark, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Susskind, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Weinmann, Mr. and Mrs. George Weinstock, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Teich; all of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kimmel, of Fitchburg, Mass.; Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Krupkin, Mr. and Mrs. Leopold Schafheimer; all of Rochester, N. Y.; Dr. and Mrs. Christopher McAree, and Françoise, of Stowe, Vermont; Dr. Charles Ravaris, of Burlington, Vermont; Mr. and Mrs. David Shephard, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Babb, and Mrs. J. M. Franklin; all of Saint John, N. B.

SWEER-FISH

The marriage of Miss Sharon Fish, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Fish, 56 Bagg Avenue, to Norman Sweer, 5993 Park Avenue, son of the late Lewis Sweer, and grandson of Mrs. Bella Sweer, 5150 Park Avenue, took place at Beth Hamedrash Hagadol Synagogue, on Sunday, October 31, at six o'clock, Rabbi Lester Rosner officiating, assisted by Cantor M. Kaufler. The bride was given in marriage by her parents. Her white, peau de soie gown, re-embroidered with appliques, had a round neckline; three-quarter-length sleeves; and Empire skirt; also a sleeveless coat extending into a long train. Her tulle illusion veil was caught to a seed-pearl-crown, with dropped jewels on the forehead; and she carried a prayer book with white orchids. Mrs. Leo Glazer was her sister's matron of honour, in a blue, crepe gown, fashioned with a sleeveless, lace bodice; round neckline; and full crepe skirt. She had a matching head-band; and carried a bouquet of white, and blue carnations. The bridesmaids were: Miss Sheila Sweer, cousin of the groom; and Miss Hannah Kleinman. Miss Sweer wore a blue, peau de soie gown with a beaded bodice; and a blue tiara. Miss Kleinman wore a blue, crepe ensemble which had a beaded bodice; and a matching headpiece. Each carried a bouquet of blue, and white roses, and carnations. Hyman Fish, brother of bride, was best man. The ushers were: Irwin Freedman, A. Yampolsky, and Leo Glazer, brothers-in-law of the bride; and Philip Glazer, cousin of the groom. Red, and white carnations and gladioli were the wedding flowers. There was orchestra music. One hundred and fifty guests were received. Mrs. Fish, mother of the bride, wore a blue, lace gown; made with a beaded bodice; short sleeves; and slim skirt. Her hat was blue; and she had a blue orchid corsage. Mrs. Leo Adler, cousin of the groom, who received with Mrs. Fish, was in a gown composed of white, crocheted wool bodice; and green velvet skirt. She had a matching hat; and a corsage of white carnations. They have taken up residence at 4960 Bourret Street. Here for the marriage were: Mr. and Mrs. Irwin Freedman, brother-in-law, and sister of the bride, and son, Scott, and daughter, Stacey, of New York; and Mr. and Mrs. B. Raskin, of Toronto, Ont.

NOTICE ABOUT PICTURES

The Canadian Jewish Review is now considering photographs for the Festival Magazine Issue for Passover, on April 1.

Preference is given to photographs posed before a plain, unfigured background; and all photographs must be straight, front-view; and finished studio pictures. Glossy proofs are required.

Do not accept dark pictures for reproduction in the sepia section of the Review from your photographer as they are not acceptable. Pictures, especially of children, must be light rather than dark and shadowed. Insist on this must.

Candid photographs can never be taken with the same care as photographs in a studio, with studio lighting. Ask your photographer to arrange for studio photographs, too, particularly for weddings and bar-mitzvahs!

SOPHIE TUCKER, WITH THE HEART OF GOLD AND CLOTHES TO MATCH

to have it and I got it. The happiest thing of all is that in getting it I hurt nobody. Some people get ruthless. Some hurt others, but I did it the hardest way and the longest one, too."

Show business liked to laugh at the fact that Miss Tucker had been "born on the road" — not the vaudeville circuits but on a road leading from Russia across Poland to the Baltic.

That was true. Her mother was traveling by wagon from Russia to join her husband in the United States. Miss Tucker was born in a farmhouse. That was perhaps her last contact with rural life. The date was January 13, and the year, according to her family, was 1887. Who's Who in America, however lists the year as 1884.

Miss Tucker was born of a Russian-Jewish family named Kalish. Her father had fled Russia to escape military service. He arrived in Boston, and a short time later sent for his family.

Miss Tucker's father adopted the name "Abuza" after a friend, Charles Abuza, had died. Mr. Kalish wanted to keep the Russians off his track.

When Sophie was eight years old the family moved to Hartford. The entertainer liked to say in later years that, although she learned her English in Boston, "no one has ever admired my Harvard accent," says the New York Times. Her parents opened a 25-cent-dinner restaurant in Hartford; Sophie and her two brothers and a sister worked in the establishment. The future star discovered that she could pick up dimes -- sometimes quarters — singing for the customers when she wasn't serving pickled herring and gefilte fish.

At sixteen, Sophie was married to Louis Tuck. They had one son, Bert Tuck. The marriage did not last, but when Sophie decided to go into show business she added a syllable to her husband's surname and became Sophie Tucker.

In 1906 she came to New York. In classic style, she made the rounds, got nowhere, ran low on money. Then she got a job at the German Village, a rathskeller at Broadway and 40th Street, for $15 a week and "throw money."

From the German Village, Miss Tucker went on to the small-time vaudeville circuits, burlesque, Tony Pastor's. In 1909 she got a part in the "Ziegfeld Follies." But the star, Nora Bayes, cut Miss Tucker's numbers drastically. And when Eva Tanguay then replaced Miss Bayes, she took over Sophie's remaining routine. Both stars later became good friends of Miss Tucker.

Just five years later (Miss Tucker was earning $1,000 a week at the Palace Theater. By that time she had already introduced the song that became as much Sophie Tucker as her robust voice and eyecatching costumes — "Some Of These Days," by Shelton Brooks.

There followed engagements at Reisenweber's in New York, at clubs and music halls in London, appearances at Sophie Tucker's Playground, her own club on 52nd Street, off Broadway; another engagement at the Palace in 1928, where she first sang "I'm the Last of the Red Hot Mommas," written for her by Jack Yellen.

At the time Mr. Yellen told Miss Tucker that something had to be done to keep her image in tune with the changing times. "Well, I'm hot," Sophie is said to have replied. "That's it," Mr. Yellen exclaimed, "The Red Hot Momma," says the New York Times. Mr. Yellen wrote numerous songs for Miss Tucker, who called him "the best friend of my lifetime after William Morris."

In the years that followed, Miss Tucker, with her long-time accompanist, Ted Shapiro, scored dazzling successes abroad, where her direct, uninhibited style and energy startled and delighted Europeans.

She returned to the United States ("Sophie Tucker, Direct From Her European Triumphs," read the Palace's marquee), touring the country, appearing in revues and cabarets and introducing such songs as "Nobody Loves a Fat Girl, But Oh How A Fat Girl Can Love," as well as "My Yiddishe Momma," which she first sang at the Palace in 1925.

At the height of the Prohibition era, Miss Tucker appeared in such revues as "LeMaire's Affairs" and "Gay Paree," in which she introduced Irving Berlin's "Blue Skies." With the Depression and the death of vaudeville, Miss Tucker's career suffered a brief reversal. She fought back, naturally, and won.

In 1932, Sophie appeared at the Capitol Theater with the film queen Lilyan Tashman, George Olsen's Orchestra, Jack Pearl and a young violinist, Jack Benny. "I didn't do it willingly, easily or gracefully," she recalled. "I did it because I had to."

She toured the country and shared billings with Will Rogers, W. C. Fields, Eddie Cantor, Al Jolson, Fanny Brice, Judy Garland, Jimmy Durante, and Bea Lillie, says the New York Times. She sang whatever audiences wanted — jazz, blues, swing, anything.

With the death of her long-time friend and adviser, William Morris, Miss Tucker had to turn to the hinterland, out of her element, touring with a dance band. But by 1936 she was once again a headliner in London, staging an American show featuring Marlene Dietrich, Douglas Fairbanks, and a young ventriloquist named Edgar Bergen.

Her forte, however, was the nightclub, from the Catskills to Miami Beach, from Las Vegas, to London. She adored the immediate impact of an audience, the laughter, the applause, the love.

"This is something that has been thrilling, thrilling, thrilling," Miss Tucker said in 1953, after a visit to New York's Garment Center. "I'm a baby. This has been pent-up all day long. I walked down the street and it was 'Hi, Sophie,' 'Hey, Sophie,' 'God bless you, Sophie,' 'How's your health, Sophie?' I don't know if our President gets that kind of love. How could he? He's got to go around in a car. He can't get out."

During the nineteen-fifties, Miss Tucker continued her nightclub appearances and gained a new audience with the growth of television.

In 1953, marking her golden jubilee as an entertainer, Miss Tucker was the guest of honor at a testimonial dinner at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel attended by 1,500 friends and admirers. At the time, New York Times wrote in an editorial:

"The span of Miss Tucker's ever-running career is beyond the common order of things in a field as ephemeral as the entertainment industry. To a versatile and generous trouper we say thanks for the half-century of songs, some sad, some comic, but always entertaining."

Miss Tucker was a tireless fundraiser. Among the groups she supported were the Jewish Theatrical Guild, the Negro Actors Guild, the Catholic Actors Guild, the Episcopal Actors Guild, the Will Rogers Memorial Hospital, and the Motion Picture Relief Fund. She also helped establish schools and youth centers in Israel.

In 1955, Brandeis University announced that the entertainer had endowed a chair in the theater arts through the Sophie Tucker Foundation, set up in 1945 to benefit various charities.

Miss Tucker's autobiography, "Some Of These Days," appeared in 1945. She was the subject of a Broadway musical, "Sophie," which closed after eight performances in 1963.

Miss Tucker's first husband died some years after they had separated. She then was married to Frank Westphal, her pianist in her early vaudeville days, says the New York Times. This union ended in divorce. Her next marriage, to Al Lackey, who had been her business manager, also ended in divorce.

More than 500 mourners crowded the Weinstein Mortuary to hear Sophie Tucker eulogized for her little-publicized private virtues, her family piety and her many anonymous charities.

Thirty cars followed her mahogany coffin, decked with red roses and green fir boughs, to the Emanuel Synagogue Cemetery in near-by Wethersfield. At the graveside, the mourners took shelter from a drenching rain under two large canopies as Rabbi Simon Noveck read the prayers for the dead.

A special railroad car hired by the William Morris Agency, Miss Tucker's theatrical agents, took a party of 36 — family and show-business colleagues - to the services.

Among the mourners were many Hartford residents who remembered Miss Tucker as Sophie Kalish, the daughter of Russian Jewish immigrants, in whose small restaurant she worked as a waitress.

Others recalled her frequent visits long after she had become a star in vaudeville, night clubs and television, to help in local causes — a new building for the Hebrew Home for the Aged, an addition to the Emanuel Synagogue, of which she was a long-time member.

Rabbi Noveck, leader of the synagogue, told in his eulogy of her visits each fall just before the Jewish High Holy Days to the graves of her parents and her brother and sister. He told of the year she was going on an Australian tour and would not be back in time for this pious duty. She came in May, five months early, to pray at each of the four graves, says the New York Times. Miss Tucker was buried near her brother and sister and just a short distance from her parents, whose graves are in adjoining Zion Cemetery.

(The editor of the Canadian Jewish Review, as a feature writer in Akron, Ohio, for the Akron Times, interviewed Sophie Tucker and found her smoking a cigarette, before nice women smoked, and reported it. The angry commotion it stirred up in the star's dressing room would be unbelievable today).

RABBIS TO GO TO GERMANY

Germany's pre-Hitler Jewish population was estimated at more than 600,000 but today it is about 25,000, most of them elderly.

The project was originally proposed by Rabbi Joseph Asher, of Greensboro, N.S., after a visit in 1964 to his former country and the school from which he fled in 1936. Rabbi Asher said that it was evident during his visit that there was a near total ignorance of Judaism and the Jewish people.

He said German educational institutions were attempting to instill into the new generation "a sense of atonement and there is an honest attempt to recount the tragedy of European Jewry", reports the New York Times. However, Rabbi Asher said that he considered this to be "a negative and incomplete approach."

The project has also received the endorsement of the Central Conference of American Rabbis and the Jewish Chautauqua Society, an arm of the National Federation of Temple Brotherhoods.

believe that the request for information from Arab countries about the exporters' trade with Israel will cease, according to the New York Times. The consensus is that Arab nations will not attempt to force American exporters to fill out and file these forms and to take action contrary to the wishes of the United States.

CLASS IN COOKERY

four large tart apples
two envelopes of gelatin
one-half cup of boiling water one can preserved pears
two tablespoons of lemon juice

Peel apples, cook until soft, and set aside. Dissolve gelatin in hot water, add lemon juice, and syrup from the pears. To this add the pears, cut into pieces, and the apple pulp. Pour this into a dish two and one-half inches deep by nine inches square. Chill in refrigerator until firm. Cut into squares, and sprinkle with ground almonds, or place a glazed cherry on top for colour. Makes six to eight servings.

Mrs. R. Bolton,
154 Nipigon Avenue, Toronto.

PURIM PRUNE HAMANTASCHEN

three-quarters cup oil
three and one-half to four cups flour rind and juice of one orange one teaspoon salt
two teaspoons baking powder
three-quarters cup sugar

Combine eggs, sugar, and oil. Add grated rind and juice of orange. Gradually add flour, baking powder, and salt, sifted together twice. Let stand for fifteen minutes. When easy to handle cut the dough into three parts. Roll out each on a well-floured board to one-eighth inch in thickness. Cut in rounds.

Filling

one pound prunes
one-half cup raisins
one-half cup walnuts
juice of one-half lemon

Soak prunes over night. Boil for fifteen minutes and drain. Pit prunes and grind fruit through mincer with nuts and raisins. Add lemon juice and mix well. Place one tablespoon of filling in centre of each round of rolled-out dough. Fold over and seal edges in triangular shape. Brush with beaten egg before baking. Bake on a greased cookie sheet at 375 degrees for twenty to thirty minutes, till golden brown.

What is the A. B. C. or Audit Bureau of Circulations, and what is its importance?

A. The A. B. C. is a voluntary association of major publishers, advertisers, national and local; and advertising agencies, working together to police circulation claims, and to translate them into facts.

Q. Why are circulation facts so important?

A. Circulation figures are the only honest basis on which print advertising is sold and purchased. Publishers base their prices for advertising on the amount of their circulation, and its quality. An advertiser buys circulation. A. B. C. circulation facts tell him the exact amount at any time.

Q. How does an advertiser know that this is really so?

A. A. B. C. publishers keep exact records of all circulation receipts for subscriptions and single copy sales. These can tell him, too, whether the circulation is sold without a premium, or with one, to induce payment; or whether the circulation is composed of membership in an organization; or whether it is sold on its merit alone. Was the subscription sold on a special rate? Was it paid by mail directly to the publisher, or to an agent? These are just some of the categories of subscription payments which are recorded.

Q. Why are some of these answers so important?

A. Sometimes these answers can tell an advertiser whether the subscriber needs to be coaxed into continuing, or starting. Are subscribers voluntarily buying the publication? Do they need a cut-rate or an added attraction to keep on?

Q. How are the figures checked?

A. The publisher checks his figures, and reports them twice a year to the head office of the A. B. C. These are audited once a year by travelling A. B. C. auditors, who check the names, the receipts, the printing invoices, the bank deposits, the paper used, the ink used, the postage receipts — all of these show the number of copies printed or mailed; and paid for. If an A. B. C. field auditor goes to work for a publication whose books he has audited within a year or so, there is an automatic re-audit by another auditor. An auditor does not audit the figures of any publication for more than two consecutive years.

Q. Does the A. B. C. allow past-due subscriptions?

A. The A. B. C. rules state that all subscriptions up for renewal must be paid within three months of the expiry date. The publisher must keep track of each one. These are considered paid, but not completely so, until paid in full, for the term to come.

Q. Are new subscriptions considered as paid?

A. Not until payment is received for the term in advance.

Q. What does this cost the publisher?

A. The publisher considers the membership as his investment to protect the investment of each advertiser. The publisher pays quarterly dues; the cost of the auditing done in his office, by the hour; and the cost of checking done further, at the A. B. C. head office. If further checking is needed, the publisher pays that cost, too. An auditor spends several days in the Canadian Jewish Review office each year.

Q. Are these the only costs?

A. The greatest cost to the publisher is to see that the records are kept in order and up to date. The Canadian Jewish Review addressograph plates are posted to show the date and method and amount of payment; and the date of the subscription, and the length of its term. A publication must carry on the address label all information that the auditor would need to guide him in checking. A publication which sells subscriptions on short-term, or with a premium, or in combination with other publications, for instance, will carry all that information and more, on the address label, coded in some way.

Q. What do A.B.C. reports and statements say about the Canadian Jewish Review?

A. They tell at a quick glance the provincial breakdown; the amount sold in a period; that the Canadian Jewish Review never sells a subscription on a premium; never with a cut rate; never jointly with another publication; never as part of membership in an organization.

The Canadian Jewish Review is sold on its own merits, and always has been. It has no affiliation with any organization.

A. B. C. reports and statements supply facts to advertisers. These facts need to be known for advertising money to be spent wisely and honestly.

A. B. C. publications can never guarantee results. They do guarantee readership.

The Canadian Jewish Review is in its 22nd year of supplying facts to advertisers, investing to protect investments.

The Canadian Jewish Review is still the only publication reaching the general Jewish community in Canada, which can provide audited, paid, A. B. C. circulation facts and figures for the protection of each advertiser.

TORONTO MARRIAGES

RUSONIK-FOSTER

The marriage of Miss Joy Rusonik, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Julius Rusonik, 2 Sandfield Road, to Barry Mark Foster, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Foster, of Hamilton, Ontario, was solemnized at Holy Blossom Temple, on Sunday, January 30, at half-past six o'clock, by Rabbi W. Gunther Plaut, assisted by Cantor Nathan Stolnitz. The bride was given in marriage by her parents. Her white, satin, appliqued Empire gown, was fashioned with mutton sleeves; and a straight skirt; and a jacket, with a high neckline, and which had a cathedral train attached. Her tulle illusion veil was attached to a headdress of bows; and she carried a cascade bouquet of white orchids, on a Bible, trimmed with green ivy and streamers. Miss Susan Rusonik, sister of the bride, was the maid of honour. She wore a gold-coloured silk taffeta, Empire gown; with a straight skirt, with streamers at the back; and cap sleeves. Her head-piece was of double bows; and her bouquet was a ball of gold-coloured, and yellow roses, and chrysanthemums. Misses Elaine and Joan Goldman, cousins of the bride; Meryl Carr, Susan Foster, and Lisa Adler, cousins of the groom; Sandi Berholtz, and Elizabeth Manson; and Mrs. Harry Lieberman, were bridesmaids. They wore gowns similar to that of the maid of honour, except that their gowns had sleeveless bodices; and they each had a single bow as a head-piece. They carried similar flower arrangements. Stephen Foster, brother of the groom, was best man. Jack Frieman, Michael Cohen, Dr. Allan Sniderman, Robert Paikin, Howard Budd, Michael Benjamin, Jonathan Wilson, and Sheldon Carr, cousin of the groom, were ushers. The aisles were decorated with standards of gold, and yellow, carnations and chrysanthemums. An orchestra played. Three hundred and fifty guests were received. Mrs. Rusonik, mother of the bride, wore a gold-coloured lace gown; with a straight skirt, which had a train extending from the knee; a matching, flowered lace headpiece; and a white orchid corsage. Mrs. Foster, mother of the groom, wore a gold-coloured brocaded gown; with its own cape; and a tiered skirt. Gold-coloured material was entwined in her hairdress; and she had a white orchid corsage. Mr. and Mrs. Barry Mare Foster spent their wedding trip in Acapulco, Mexico; the bride going away in moss-green, three-quarter-length, belted, wool suit; with fur trimming; and matching hat; gray accessories and an orchid corsage. They will reside in Hamilton, Ontario. Mr. and Mrs. Sydney Hytner, of Manchester, England, were guests.

MONTREAL MARRIAGES

LANNER-WEISKOPF

The marriage of Miss Blüma Weiskopf, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Isak Weiskopf, 3530 Bedford Road, to Michael Lanner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hyman Lanner, 6605 Nice Road, took place at Zichron Kedoshim Synagogue, on Sunday, December 19, at six o'clock, Rabbi Jacob J. Zlotnick officiating, assisted by Cantor Leib Raskin, Rabbi Maurice S. Cohen, and Cantor Solomon Gisser. The bride was given in marriage by her parents. Her sleeveless, white, peau de soie gown was fashioned with headwork at the bodice; a round neckline; A-line skirt; and a long, lace train extending from the shoulders. Her tulle illusion veil was topped by a pill-box hat; and she carried a bouquet of white, and yellow orchids. Miss Gloria Urkiewitz was maid of honour for her cousin. She wore a sleeveless, turquoise-green, peau de soie gown, with its own long-sleeved coat; and a beaded tiara; and carried a bouquet of yellow carnations, centered with a white orchid. Sarah Weiskopf, aged eleven years, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. She wore a turquoise-green, peau de soie dress; and had a matching hair-bow; and carried a bouquet of white, and yellow carnations. Felice Kaden, aged three years, cousin of the groom, was flower girl. She wore a green, velvet dress, trimmed with white lace; and a green hair-bow; and carried a nosegay of yellow, and white carnations. Michael Rogosinsky, aged three years, cousin of the groom, was ring-bearer. Leonard Lenetsky was his cousin's best man. The ushers were: William Levine, and Mark Levine, cousins of the groom; Dr. John Cohen, Marvin Cohen, Richard Singer, and Jack Dym. Yellow, and white chrysanthemums, gladioli, and carnations were the wedding flowers. An orchestra played. Three hundred and twenty-five guests were received. Mrs. Weiskopf, mother of the bride, wore a sleeveless, green and gold-coloured, lame gown, made with a slim skirt; and its own jacket; with a matching, pill-box hat. Mrs. Lanner, mother of the groom, wore a sleeveless, green, beaded, peau de soie gown; made with a slim skirt; and a green coat; also a green petal hat. Their flowers were corsages of yellow orchids. Mr. and Mrs. Michael Lanner spent their wedding trip at the Nevele Country Club, in Ellenville, N. Y.; the bride departing in a beige, knitted suit, and an Alaska seal coat; with a corsage of white orchids. They have taken up residence at 6950 Fielding Avenue. Here for the marriage were: Mr. and Mrs. A. Urkiewitz, and Miss Gloria Urkiewitz, and Howard; Mr. and Mrs. G. Miller; cousins of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. D. Ehrlich; all of Paterson, N. J.; Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Gill, of Winnipeg, Manitoba; Mrs. Pauline Ross, of Brooklyn, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. M. Moore, of Newark, N. J.; Mr. and Mrs. A. Finger, and Mr. and Mrs. B. Kirsch; all of Boston, Mass.; uncles, and aunts of the groom: Mr. and Mrs. Alec Levine, Mark Levine, William Levine, and Irene, of Dorchester, Mass.; Mr. and Mrs. David Levine, of Toronto, Ont.; Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Lenetsky, of Joliette, Quebec; Dr. and Mrs. William Kaden, and Felice, of Boston; Mr. and Mrs. Alec Lenetsky, of Joliette; Seymour Sureff, of Baltimore, Maryland; all cousins of the groom; and Miss Carol Finer, of Boston.

MARRIAGES

HORNFELDT-BAKER

The marriage of Miss Marlene Esther Baker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Murray Baker, 86 Garthdale Court, to Marvin Hornfeldt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Hornfeldt, 163 Ava Road, took place at Beth Sholom Synagogue, on Sunday, December 26, at half-past five o'clock. Rabbi David Monson officiated. The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore an Empire gown, of white silk. It was arranged with a square neckline; and long sleeves; and an A-line skirt, which finished with a train. Her shoulder-length veil of tulle illusion was gathered to a pill-box hat, of ostrich feathers; and she had a heart-shaped, diamond pendant; and carried a prayer book with white orchids. Mrs. Mark Baker, sister-in-law of the bride, was matron of honour. She wore a light mauve, silk shantung gown; the fitted bodice having kimona sleeves; and the full skirt, of organza, finishing with a train. She had a matching headband; and a wristlet of blue-tinted carnations and roses, trimmed with green ivy. Miss Carol Baker, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. She wore a lilac-coloured, silk shantung, Empire gown; with puffed sleeves of organza; and a matching head-piece; and a wristlet of blue carnations and roses, trimmed with stephanotis and ivory-coloured ribbon. Ellen Terry Hornfeldt, niece of the groom; and Heather Cheryl Baker, niece of the bride; were junior bridesmaids. The former was in a mauve, sleeveless gown, with an A-line skirt had a bow at the back, which finished at floor-length. The latter wore a similar gown, in blue. Each had a matching hair-bow; and carried a bouquet of mauve and blue-tinted carnations, roses, and chrysanthemums, trimmed with green ivy. David L. Hornfeldt was his brother's best man. The ushers were: Mark and Jack Baker; brothers of the bride; Gilbert Zamonsky, cousin of the groom; Maxwell Snider, cousin of the bride; James Rogers, and Bernard Sherman. The wedding decor was of mauve, white and blue-tinted clusters of chrysanthemums, carnations, gladioli, stephanotis, and violets; and buttercups, trimmed with green ivy. One hundred and twenty-five guests were received. William Leibel, 104 Waterloo Avenue, uncle of the bride, asked the blessing. David L. Hornfeldt, brother of the groom, was master of ceremonies. Mrs. Hornfeldt, mother of the groom, wore a two-piece blue brocade gown; with a matching head-piece, and accessories; and an orchid wristlet. Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Hornfeldt spent their wedding trip in Jamaica, the bride going away in a two-piece, brown wool suit, and hat; and accessories; and an orchid wristlet. They have taken up residence at 14 Meadowbrook Avenue. The groom is the grandson of Mrs. Tobi Hornfeldt, 1648 Bathurst Street. Here for the marriage were: Mr. and Mrs. William Baker, uncle, and aunt of the bride, and daughter, Miss Eileen Baker, and son, Albert Baker; of Montreal, Quebec; Harry Kern, great-uncle of the groom; Mr. and Mrs. A. Shukkan, and Martin; all of Boston, Mass.; Mrs. B. Stein, and Mrs. Charles Magazener; cousins, of New York.

NOTICE ABOUT PICTURES

The Canadian Jewish Review is now considering photographs for the Festival Magazine Issue for Passover, on April 1.

Preference is given to photographs posed before a plain, unfigured background; and all photographs must be straight, front-view; and finished studio pictures. Glossy proofs are required.

Do not accept dark pictures for reproduction in the sepia section of the Review from your photographer as they are not acceptable. Pictures, especially of children, must be light rather than dark and shadowed. Insist on this must.

Little, Old, Israeli Lady Dies At 117, Buried In Jerusalem By Request

Varda Shabato, Israel's oldest citizen, died this winter at the age of one hundred and seventeen years. In fulfilment of her last request she was buried in the hills of Jerusalem following a simple ceremony. Mrs. Shabato had spent the last two years of her life at Shaar Menashe, one of the thirteen homes for the aged maintained by Malben, the Joint Distribution Committee welfare program, on behalf of aged, ill., and otherwise handicapped immigrants in Israel, with funds from the United Jewish Appeal.

During her lifetime Mrs. Shabato bore twenty-two children. Until four years ago she lived with her only surviving son in a neighboring Arab country. When her favorite grandson, Avner Cohen, immigrated to Israel four years ago she followed him. She said she wished to spend her remaining years in the land of her forefathers. On the trip to Israel she became El Al's oldest passenger and possibly the world's oldest air traveller.

Mrs. Shabato was born in Turkey in 1848. That she was Israel's oldest citizen was confirmed by the Ministry of Interior. The Ministry also reported that there were 170 Israelis above the age of one hundred years.

Upon her arrival in Israel, Avner, who had preceded her, insisted that she come to live with him and her five great-grandchildren, despite economic hardships and lack of space. JDC-Malben helped out through its extra-mural program. When the venerable centenarian began to weaken, her grandson agreed that it would be best for her to enter Malben's Shaar Menashe home, where she could be properly looked after. Right up to the very end the doctors and workers at Shaar Menashe marvelled at her alertness and clarity of speech. Early one day, she quietly passed away, just three years shy of the Biblical one hundred and twenty. Her devoted grandson Avner escorted her remains to the cemetery.

HISTORY IN POTS AND SHERDS OF ANCIENT ISRAEL

The petition is an address to the local governor whose title, "sar," is that given to Israel's ministers today. The heart-to-heart cry deserves quotation, even though it is repetitious:

"Let my Lord the governor hear the word of his servant. Thy selvant was reaping in H's land, and finished and gathered as usual before the Sabboth. Then came H and took thy servant's clothes. When I had finished my reaping in these days, he took away my garment. And all my brethren will bear witness in my favor, all who were reaping with me when the sun was hot.

"Verily, I am free of guilt. I appeal to the governor that he return my garment and show mercy to his servant."

We may hope that the governor showed mercy.

before the Party for questioning. But since they are very much along in age they were resigned to face the music. I was repeatedly asked to be careful to whom and how I spoke about Russia in the U.S. because they said they would suffer.

The younger members cautioned me not to write to them. They live in miserable little rooms, sharing a kitchen and bathroom; in constant fear of their lives. Their wages are 80 rubles a month for a secretary, 90 for a nurse, 110 for an engineer, 120 for a doctor. When I told them how much I earned and how I lived, they were amazed.

They seem to have enough food, but oranges are 50 kopecks (55 cents). Clothing inferior and expensive. Shoes 30 to 45 rubles a pair.

I was glad to get out of the USSR. I actually was scared. What a horrible way to live. I told my friends here, that if I ever get disgusted and complain about conditions here in the U.S. to say to me, "Remember Soviet Russia."

In conclusion let me say to you that if you use what I have written to you, please be careful not to mention my name or my relatives' names. I would not want any harm to come to them because of me. I also want to thank you and the other members of your family for making it possible for me to be here in the U.S., as you did so many memorable years ago.

junior bridesmaid. They wore emerald-green gowns; with straight skirts; and emerald-green head-bows; and they carried muffs, covered with natural green orchids. Reisa Sheriff, cousin of the groom, was flower girl. She wore an emerald-green gown, with an overdress of white lace; and designed with a jewel neckline; long sleeves; and a long, green bow, at the front of the dress. Her head-band was of flowers; and she carried a basket of red rose petals. Harvey Ager, cousin of the bride; Howard and Gerald Trifler, brothers of the bride; Terry Sokoloff, Marvin Sokoloff, Laurie Sokoloff, Sheldon Sokoloff, and Ernest Sheriff, cousins of the groom; Evan Hugh Roberts, and Leo Powell, were ushers. Three hundred and fifty guests were received. Pedestals of green-tinted, and white carnations, with lanterns, as a centrepiece; and green-tinted and white carnations, banked the head-table at the reception hall. Mrs. Abe Trifler, mother of the bride, wore an emerald-green, peau de soie gown; with a mandarin collar; and beaded bodice; and a gold-coloured and white, beaded hemline, which shaped into a slight train; and a cape effect jacket. She had ribbon entwined through her hair-dress; and a white orchid wrist-let. Mrs. Boris Sokoloff, mother of the groom, wore an emerald-green, silk gown, with a chiffon overdress; and beaded bodice; and a leaf head-band, entwined through her hair-dress; and a white orchid wristlet. Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Sokoloff spent their wedding trip in Nassau; and the Laurentians, travelling via Air Canada. The bride went away in a three-piece beige and cream-coloured, wool tweed suit; with a hip-length belted jacket, which had a Norwegian fox shawl collar and cuffs; matching accessories; and an orchid corsage. They will take up residence at 1154 Wilson Avenue. Mr. and Mrs. John Trifler, Philippe Trifler, and Mrs. N. Moskovicetz, all great-uncles and great-aunts of the bride, of Paris, France; Mrs. Conrad Sikora, of Riverside, California, cousin of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Trifler, of Cleveland, Ohio, uncle and aunt of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. Ted Jungreis, of Baltimore, Maryland, and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Berg, of Waterloo, cousins of the groom, were guests.

MARRIAGES

TRIFLER-SOKOLOFF

The marriage of Miss Brenda Trifler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Abe Trifler, 453 Lawrence Avenue West, to Edwin Sokoloff, son of Mr. and Mrs. Boris Sokoloff, 45 Prince Charles Drive, was solemnized at Beth Tzedec Synagogue, on February 6, at half-past five o'clock, by Dr. Stuart E. Rosenberg, Rabbi. The bride was given in marriage by her parents. She wore a white, peau de soie gown. The lace bodice was fashioned with a scooped, scalloped neckline; and long sleeves; and a straight skirt, with a long train. Her tulle illusion veil was waist-length; and placed by an open, beaded pill-box; and she carried a bouquet of white orchids and Calla lilies. Mrs. Martin Cohen, aunt of the bride, of Detroit, Michigan, was matron of honour. Miss Francine Sokoloff, sister of the groom, was maid of honour. Mrs. Cohen wore a bright pink, silk shantung gown; with a beaded, turtle-neck top; and a straight skirt, with a beaded hemline; and had a matching head-band; and carried a muff, covered with pink orchids. Miss Sokoloff wore an emerald-green, peau de soie gown; with a jewel neckline, which was beaded; and a straight skirt, with a beaded hemline; and a matching head-band; and she carried a muff, covered with natural green orchids. Misses Anita Ager, Elaine Cohen, and Charlotte Sternberg, cousins of the bride; Phyllis Greenglass, Brenda Caplan, and Nancy Lirette, were bridesmaids. Miss Hedda Cohen, cousin of the bride, was

U. S. TOURIST TELLS OF HIS EXPERIENCES IN RUSSIA

The following letters appeared in the American Jewish World of the twin cities of St. Paul and Minneapolis:

To the many skeptics that, in spite of the mounting evidence to the contrary, continue to feel that Soviet Jewry is receiving equal treatment as other Russian citizens, I am asking you to please publish the following letter I recently received from one that spent three weeks in Moscow, Kiev, and Odessa. The names I am holding back for reasons cited in the letter. The findings are similar to those I saw when visiting the USSR.

Al Greenberg, D.D.S.
St. Paul, Minnesota.

Dear Friends:

Since returning from my trip, I have been shopping for warm clothing for my needy relatives in the USSR, which I just sent off. After evaluating my trip a bit more calmly I am anxious to tell you about it. For to me it was a very difficult journey, a heart-breaking one for many reasons.

First of all, as a life-long liberal I had somewhat naively believed that the Soviets offered a hope of ending war, poverty, and discrimination such as anti-Semitism and intolerance. What I found was that their way of life was just another form of tyranny. My relatives, all professional people, were so frightened and so miserable that it was pitiful. I was constantly cautioned not to talk in my hotel or in their homes. "Walls have ears."

Like other tourists who were visiting their relatives, I, too, did most of my visiting and talking on the streets outside. Several told me that their sons and daughters were refused admittance to the University.

In Odessa I went over to the house where I used to live. A Jewish woman came out asking me what I was looking for. When I explained to her that I was a visiting American she whispered, "Only God knows how we live and suffer."

They all admitted that anti-Semitism is rampant. One relative who is intermarried and is holding an important position needed an assistant. He was told to hire a non-Jew. In mixed marriages of Jews and non-Jews the children are asked to choose what they want to be — and usually they feel it is better for them to be known as non-Jews.

Because of my visit, my relatives told me they expected to be called

HISTORY IN POTS AND SHERDS OF ANCIENT ISRAEL

By Norman Bentwich, in the Jewish Frontier

This year is the centenary of the foundation in England of the Palestine Exploration Fund, which had as its object the continual and systematic investigation of the archaeology, topography, and physical geography, and the manners and customs of the Holy Land.

The Fund has had an abundant offspring. Archaeological societies for the exploration of the Bible Land have been multiplied in many European countries and in America, and particularly in Israel. There the search for records of antiquity by the exploration of the ancient sites is a national pride, and has an almost religious appeal. It gives the immigrants, who are two-thirds of the Jewish population, and who come from the most diverse environments and cultures, roots in the land and a sense of unity with the past. So it is that the Antiquities Department of the Israel Government, the Archaeology School of the Hebrew University of Jerusalem, and half a dozen ardent local societies are busy all the time excavating big and small sites.

A splendid archaeological museum has just been opened in Israel's Jerusalem, as part of the national treasure-house of art and antiquity, and supplements the Rockefeller Museum in the Arab City which, in the days of the Palestine Mandate, was built to be the treasure-house of all the important finds in western Palestine and in Transjordan.

Palestine is the country where the importance of seemingly small, trivial, commonplace relics of antiquity for knowledge of the past of the movements of peoples, the rise and fall of empires, was expounded by the genius of archaeology, the late Sir Flinders Petrie.

He proved that the pottery vessels and fragments strewn on or under every tel (mound), by their decoration, shape, and ornament, could be a sure guide to historical events. History was built up from a mass of little objects left in destroyed towns.

You cannot dig anywhere in that land, you can scarcely tread anywhere, without lighting on a fragment of pottery or sherd which to the expert eye tells a tale. And every now and then the digger is rewarded by finding an inscription in the Hebrew or Aramaic script, or a baked brick with cuneiform writing, that records a legal transaction or just a name.

To turn from the general to the particular, the record of the most recent diggings in Israel illustrates this feature of modern archaeology.

The most sensational and dramatic expedition of the last years has been Professor Yadin's excavation of the Herodian stronghold of Massada, the rocky mountain which rises sheer above the Dead Sea. He has revealed the palace-fortress in the heart of the hill where Herod had his retreat, and where, after the destruction of the Jerusalem Temple, the Jewish Zealots made their last desperate stand against the Roman legions.

As Josephus, the contemporary Jewish historian, has recorded in moving narrative, they put an end to their lives when the besiegers were about to storm the last bastion. Among the myriad scattered fragments were ten inscribed sherds, each with a Hebrew name, and no more. One bears the name of the Zealot leader. It is a tempting conjecture that the sherds represent the lots which were cast by the last ten survivors in the fort, to determine who should give the last coup de grace and then kill himself.

Some ten miles north of the fortress of Massada on the shore of the Dead Sea another towering hill rises, less grim but equally crowded with history. It is En-gedi ("the spring of the kid"), and it rises above a smiling oasis of palms and intensive cultivation in the midst of the lifeless and treeless region.

The archaeologists have found there many jar handles marked in Aramaic, from the period of the Persian Empire of Cyrus. They belong probably to the tithe of balsam, the "balm of Gilead," which was manufactured there from the fruit of the balsam trees. A factory existed in Engedi for perfume, and the sherds indicate the share of the autonomous province of Judea.

In the heart of the wilderness, between Massada and Beersheba, another Israel expedition has been busy for some years excavating a mound which covers with the debris of ages the Canaanite fortress city of Arad, mentioned several times in the Bible. The identity of the tel with the Biblical site was proved by an inscription in a pottery bowl.

The name Arad in the early Phoenician-Hebrew script is roughly scratched seven times on the inner surface of the bowl, not always in the proper order of the letters. It is surmised that some untutored would-be scribe was trying out his hand.

Besides the tell-tale bowl, over a hundred inscribed pottery sherds came to light in the debris. Most are in Hebrew, but some in Aramaic and some in Arabic; the latter being, of course, much later in date. The Hebrew sherds are business accounts, and a reference to the King is dated to the time of King Hezekiah of Judah. It is presumed that they mark the royal tithe, because nearby are jar handles with the expression of the royal seal.

Lastly, an unexpected flood of light is cast on the social conditions of the peasants in Bible times by a sherd, inscribed with a dozen Hebrew lines which was unearthed near Ashdod. There the new southern harbor of Israel is being constructed by an Israel-American enterprise on the site of what was a Philistine town.

Scholars believe that it dates from the reign of King Josiah of Judah, who captured the coastal towns from the Assyrian garrisons. The sherd preserves a plaintive petition, more than 2500 years old, from a humble serf of a harsh landlord, whose name is given. The serf was a reaper of the crop, and his one and only garment was seized by his master.
